Federal Court Ruling Supports National Roadless Rule

Federal Court Ruling Supports National Roadless Rule

Hunters and anglers cite decision's far-reaching implications for backcountry fish and wildlife habitat and outdoor activities, stress need for continued national management guidelines.

Theodore Roosevelt Conservation Partnership

WASHINGTON, DC -- (AmmoLand.com)- In a decision that could have far-reaching implications for management of national forest roadless areas and important fish and wildlife habitat, a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals today affirmed a 9th District Court judge's ruling that the Bush administration unlawfully repealed the national roadless rule when it established a short-lived rule that enabled development of state-specific plans for roadless area management. The District Court's 2006 ruling enjoined the state petitions rule and reinstated the 2001 roadless rule.

Citing "procedural shortcomings" that violated the National Environmental Policy Act and the Endangered Species Act, the 9th Circuit Court decision stated that "the district court did not abuse its discretion in ordering the Forest Service to comply with the Roadless Rule as a remedy" for these deficiencies.

The Theodore Roosevelt Conservation Partnership, which has mobilized a broad cross-section of sportsmen, conservationists and recreationists in support of roadless area management that safeguards valuable habitat and activities such as hunting and fishing, asserted that the decision takes an important step toward ensuring America's backcountry traditions.

"Today's 9th Circuit roadless ruling affirms what many hunters and anglers have been saying all along," said Joel Webster, associate director of campaigns for the TRCP Center for Western Lands, "namely, that the remaining federal lands that are roadless must be conserved for the high-quality hunting and fishing they provide American citizens."

Close to 60 million acres of roadless areas are encompassed within America's national forests and grasslands. A series of conflicting court decisions regarding the 2001 roadless rule have left management of these areas unsettled for years. Many outdoors-oriented groups support a national rule that conserves America's backcountry lands and the fish and wildlife, sporting and recreational resources they sustain.

"Sportsmen are uniquely positioned to appreciate the value and benefit of our backcountry," Webster concluded, "and we maintain that a strong national roadless rule offers the best management tool for conserving inventoried roadless lands and sustaining healthy game populations and public-lands sporting opportunities."

Pursuit Welcomes Keith Warren to 2010 Programming

Pursuit Welcomes Keith Warren to 2010 Programming

LUVERNE, AL – (AmmoLand.com)- The Pursuit Channel is proud to announce the addition of Keith Warren and his acclaimed “Deer and Wildlife Stories with Keith Warren” and “The High Road” television shows to the 2010 lineup. With over 25 years in outdoor programming, Warren brings a wealth of knowledge and experience coupled with a deeply held conviction for passing on the traditions of an outdoor lifestyle.

“My mission is to unify sportsmen no matter how they hunt, what they hunt or where they hunt. In order to protect the future of hunting, sportsmen must unite and realize that if we don't, the hunter/sportsmen will be the next endangered species,” Warren said. “The best way to do that is by looking for a common thread that connects us all.”

Warren believes that the best available platform for communicating that common thread is through programming on the Pursuit Channel. “Pursuit Channel is connecting with the blue collar sportsmen that other networks seem to have left behind. The diehard outdoorsmen and women of our country are craving outdoor programming they can relate to,” said Warren.

“Additionally, Pursuit is committed to working closely with producers to create a network that will provide producers with a place where they can grow while also providing outdoor manufacturers with measurable results that don't break the bank,” continued Warren.

Warren's confidence in Pursuit follows a similar announcement made by Mossy Oak earlier this month, when the company committed their resources to branded, destination blocks of programming, anchored by their award-winning, popular programs. Other major outdoor personalities to make a recent move to Pursuit include Hank Parker and his boys Hank Jr. and Billy “Catfish” Parker.

Rusty Faulk, CEO of Pursuit network added, “We couldn't be more excited to welcome Keith to the Pursuit family. Keith is ‘our kind of people’; he loves the outdoors, cares deeply for the resource and has dedicated himself to making sure that hunting and the outdoor lifestyle have a long future ahead of them. All those great traits together with his wealth of experience in outdoor programming make him the perfect fit for Pursuit.”

Keith Warren and his popular “Deer and Wildlife Stories with Keith Warren” and “The High Road” shows will begin airing on Pursuit in

The Butt Out 2 From Hunter's Specialties

Helps Make Quick Work of Field Dressing Chores.

Hunter's Specialties

Cedar Rapids, IA – (AmmoLand.com)- Hunter's Specialties has taken their revolutionary Butt Out Big Game Dressing Tool and made it even better.

The new Butt Out 2 is an extra 2" longer than the original, making it easier to maintain a firm grip on the handle during field dressing chores.

The enhanced “Butt Stop” feature molded into the handle makes it easier to keep the Butt Out inserted to the proper length when removing the animal's alimentary canal.

The Butt Out 2 works for deer, antelope, bear, hogs, and similar-sized big game. Simply insert the Butt Out 2 into the animal's alimentary canal, twist and pull to remove a portion of the intestine, which can then be tied off and removed. This eliminates having to cut around the area with a knife, making the field dressing process quicker, safer, and easier.

To view the Butt Out instructional video, go to www.hunterspec.com.

The Butt Out 2 sells for a suggested retail price of $14.99.

Keep Predators Away From Your Elk Carcass

Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation

MISSOULA, Mont. - (AmmoLand.com)- Black bears, grizzlies, cougars, wolves, coyotes—just some of the potential looters you may find skulking around the scene of your next successful elk hunt. These tips from the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation will help keep meat stealers away from your elk carcass.

“Deterring predators ensures all that hard-won protein ends up in your freezer, but personal safety is a factor, too. If you hunt in grizzly country, for example, it’s worth minimizing the risk of surprising a bear that has claimed your kill,” said P.J. DelHomme, hunting editor of the Elk Foundation’s member magazine, Bugle.

Here are five tips for discouraging marauding carnivores:

1. Hang quarters at an unreachable height 100 yards or more from the entrails, etc. Parachute chord works well; it’s small, light, cheap and strong enough for the job. Bring way more than you think you need. Try to select a hanging tree in a relatively open area that can be glassed from at least 300 yards away. If no trees are available, you can hang quarters off a rimrock ledge, too. Prime cuts of meat should get the first trip out.
2. When safe and legal, build a fire next to the quarters. Burn damp, pitchy wood that produces a good plume of smoke. This detracts predators and helps you locate the site on your return trip. Remember to mark the site in your GPS and take compass bearings as a backup.
3. Leave an article of clothing with the quarters, preferably something that’s been close to your skin and absorbed your scent. A brightly colored item also helps you locate the site. Urinate nearby to further saturate the area with human smell.
4. Many hunters won’t carry their rifle or bow once their elk tag has been punched. However, when returning to a carcass, consider carrying a handgun or bear spray for personal protection in case you encounter a defiant critter. Be as noisy and obnoxious as possible as you approach the site. Clap your hands. Sing as loud as you can.

5. Be ready to back off. An elk carcass is never worth fighting over. If a looter is adamant that it needs the meat more than you do, or has rendered your elk unsalvageable, check the state's hunting regulations. A game warden may issue you a new elk permit.

Additionally, if legal, you may have an opportunity to add the predator to your game bag. Remember that many predator populations need management via state-regulated hunting, same as elk. The Elk Foundation is a vocal supporter of this system for managing restored populations of gray wolves in Idaho, Montana and Wyoming, too.

Bugle magazine is a wealth of elk hunting and conservation information. An annual subscription is included with a $35 membership to the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation. For details, visit www.rmef.org.

About the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation:

Snowy peaks, dark timber basins and grassy meadows. RMEF is leading an elk country initiative that has conserved or enhanced habitat on over 5.6 million acres—a land area equivalent to a swath three miles wide and stretching along the entire Continental Divide from Canada to Mexico. RMEF also works to open, secure and improve public access for hunting, fishing and other recreation. Get involved at www.rmef.org or 800-CALL ELK.

Whitetails Unlimited Sponsors Wisconsin DNRs 2009 Learn to Hunt Program

Sandhill Wildlife Area offers special hunt for novices; WTU continues support.

Whitetails Unlimited

Wisconsin – (AmmoLand.com)- For the past decade, Whitetails Unlimited has provided support for the Wisconsin DNRs Learn to Deer Hunt Program, and is the official sponsor of Sandhill's Youth Essay Contest. This year WTU is again offering prizes for the contest, and educational materials for classroom instruction. The contest is open to youth under 16 years old who have never hunted deer.

To date, Whitetails Unlimited has provided more than $11,000 in financial support including branded merchandise and educational material for the program. Prizes have included rifles in an assortment of calibers, binoculars, knives & sheaths, and caps. The program is held at the Sandhill Outdoor Skills Center.

This is an ideal way to provide a great experience for a first-time deer hunter, said WTU Executive Director Pete Gerl. At a time when everyone in the outdoor industry is concerned about new hunter recruitment, a program like this is the perfect vehicle to ensure that new hunters are mentored in the right way.

WTU is the official sponsor of the essay contest, and is providing prizes for first through fifth place.

The Sandhill Outdoor Skills Center is a 9,158-acre wildlife area operated by the Wisconsin DNR in central Wisconsin. The facility offers an on-site education center, shooting ranges, trails, and a wide variety of workshops and seminars, including hunting and trapping experiences. The state acquired Sandhill in 1962, and it is one of the largest areas in North America containing an enclosed white-tailed deer herd regulated by public hunting.

The Learn to Hunt Deer Program provides an opportunity for about 200 youth and beginner adults to receive training on deer hunting, and then participate in a special hunt several weeks before the statewide gun deer season. In past years, 50 to 60 deer were harvested annually by these novice hunters on the Sandhill property.

Manufacturer: Smith & Wesson

Model Number: 1911 .45 ACP

GunReports.com

GunReports.com -- (AmmoLand.com)- The SW1911 operates with two functional variations on traditional 1911 design. The first variation is an externally mounted extractor. John Browning himself saw the extractor as the one weak point in the 1911 system and developed the external design to enhance reliability and maintenance. The second difference is in the control of the firing pin via the grip safety. Depress the grip safety and the firing pin is free to move forward. This is very similar to the Schwartz system that was adapted for use in the Kimber Type II pistols, but Smith & Wesson has claimed new patents on its variation.

Elsewhere, another difference between Smith & Wesson and many other firearms companies is that Smith & Wesson is a manufacturer and not merely an importer of complete pistols or of parts that they assemble in stateside factories. Industry buzz says that in fact, Smith & Wesson has been manufacturing frames and slides for other companies that produce 1911 pistols.

Now it is Smith & Wesson's turn. We received our 1911 just weeks before its official introduction at the 2003 Shooting, Hunting and Outdoor Trade Show. This new pistol was finished in handsome satin stainless with distinctive gold graphics. Cocking serrations were cut on the front and back of the slide. Novak low-mount three-dot sights were dovetailed into place. Lockup was via a bushing with a full-length guide rod. The grips were a tasteful black rubber. The mainspring housing was also black and cleanly checkered. Other black accents were the beavertail grip safety, the slide release, left-side-only thumb safety and checkered magazine-release button. The hammer is skeletonized with the sides polished, but the interior of its sculpture and the outer surface continues the theme of using a black contrast. Two eight-round magazines were supplied. We measured the single-action trigger to break at exactly 4 pounds.

When we fired this gun over five different range sessions, we were impressed when it delivered five-shot groups of 3.0 inches and under with virtually every scrap of ammunition we could find in our closet. Most groups were in the 2.7-inch range. If the SW1911 is not a top-grade target pistol, then it is among the most consistent shooting pistols we have seen come off an assembly line in some time. This is not an inexpensive pistol nor is it out of the ballpark, either. It is our impression that the design intent of this pistol was for its designers to hear someone someday refer to the SW 1911 pistol as "old reliable." We had no failures to feed, extraction issues, or any other problem.

Governor to Sign One-Gun-A-Month Bill Today

AUG 06, 2009 09:39A.M.

Governor to Sign One-Gun-A-Month Bill Today

New Jesery

Trenton, NJ - (AmmoLand.com)- Please Contact Governor Corzine Immediately! Today at 12:00 P.M., Governor Jon Corzine (D-NJ) will sign Assembly Bill 339/Senate Bill 1774 into law. The signing will take place at Trenton City Hall located at 319 East State Street in Trenton.

Simply stated, this bill would prohibit an individual from purchasing more than one handgun within a 30-day period. The state already requires an individual to first obtain a permit to purchase – a process which includes an extensive criminal background check and a minimum of 30 days to complete. This bill is just another step that anti-gun legislators are trying to take to erode our Right to Keep and Bear Arms.

This legislation gives anti-gun extremists carte blanche to further hinder your right to purchase firearms. Next it could be one rifle or shotgun per 30-day period or even one handgun per six months or year.

Please contact Governor Corzine IMMEDIATELY and respectfully urge him not to sign A339/S1774. Also, please remind the Governor that you will remember his decision in November. The Governor can be reached by phone at (609) 292-6000 or visit www.state.nj.us/governor/about/contact/ to send email.

About:

New Jersey Citizens Defense League: New Jersey needs sensible gun laws. In spite of the claims by politicians, the current batch of gun laws do NOT keep guns out of "the wrong hands". They keep guns out of the right hands. They put massive obstacles in the way of law abiding citizen's attempts to purchase the tools needed to defend their lives, their homes, and their families. The tangle of legislation and bureaucratic 'administrative codes' results in confusing and ever changing rules that are nearly impossible for the average citizen to understand. An obscure rule change can turn a law abiding citizen into a criminal overnight and with out warning.

The Box O' Truth

Southeast, Texas --(AmmoLand.com)- "My friend John_Wayne777 from AR15.com, wrote an excellent article about Low Light Essentials.

He is also the author of the excellent Buick O' Truth articles on this site.

The Low Light article is so good that I didn't want it lost in cyberspace, and offered to host it on the website.

Topics covered include:

Low Light Essentials – Gear

- #1 – The Anatomy of Low Light
- #2 – General Purpose Tactical Lights
- #3 – Features to look for in a Tactical Light
- #4 – Weapon Lights for Handguns
- #5 – Weapon Lights for Long Guns
- #6 – Handgun Sights and Lasers
- #7 – Long Gun Sights and Lasers
- #8 – Ammunition

It is full of accurate and critical information. I agree with his conclusions and heartily recommend this to our friends here. Enjoy!" – Don
